

St. Patrick: Criminal, Good Guy, or Something in Between?

Each year, many people celebrate St. Patrick's day. If you didn't know, he was a 5th century priest who supposedly banished all of the snakes from Ireland.

Now imagine, if St. Patrick were around today, that he came to visit San Diego. In the process of his visit he loves San Diego so much that he decides that it too should be snake free considering the number of snake bites we have every year. With a wave of his shillelagh (walking stick/staff) the snakes all slither off and leave San Diego.

Should we be happy, angry, or not even care?

Use your knowledge of ecology and information you may have learned from your other classes to make your case. You must have a minimum of 5 major points to support your arguments. This is a fact based project so please be sure to include your sources cited in APA format.

St. Patrick: Criminal, Good Guy, or Something in Between?

Each year, many people celebrate St. Patrick's day. If you didn't know, he was a 5th century priest who supposedly banished all of the snakes from Ireland.

Now imagine, if St. Patrick were around today, that he came to visit San Diego. In the process of his visit he loves San Diego so much that he decides that it too should be snake free considering the number of snake bites we have every year. With a wave of his shillelagh (walking stick/staff) the snakes all slither off and leave San Diego.

Should we be happy, angry, or not even care?

Use your knowledge of ecology and information you may have learned from your other classes to make your case. You must have a minimum of 5 major points to support your arguments. This is a fact based project so please be sure to include your sources cited in APA format.